EXPERIENCE MATTERS.

That's why we demand it. Siena Heights University's Healthcare Leadership graduate program is intended for individuals who have five or more years of work experience in a healthcare-related profession. Our program helps prepare healthcare administrators lead hospitals, physician group practices, nursing homes and home health agencies, as well as direct the operation of hospitals, health systems and other types of organizations. Participation also matters. Students learn to apply administrative theories, models and principles learned in the program courses through a 200-hour practicum experience at a health service organization or other health-related settings. Our students are also asked to join the higher education network of the American College of Healthcare Executives. This allows students to engage in their profession, as well as network with their peers. Our competency-based approach is designed to inspire and prepare confident, competent, purposeful and ethical leaders. Learn to think more strategically and critically, manage with clarity, relate well with diverse constituencies and make decisions with wisdom, compassion and ethical acumen.

Cohort groups are structured to allow students to complete our program in 12-24 months. Courses are 8 weeks in length.

Degree plans are designed with practical coursework for working adults. Program is offered online. A blended version of some courses may be available on the Adrian, Lansing and Southfield campuses.
